WHEELING, APRIL 18, 1889.

ALL the Trusts do business for cash. What sort of a language is ours, anyhow?

NEXT Monday Massachusetts votes on constitutional prohibition. The chances are against the amendment.

If Sullivan and Kilrain fight don't put up all your wealth on the Boston article. He is too close a crony of John Barleycorn.

Who is the American poet that will do justice to our brave fellows who went down at Apia? The muse should wait for no stronger wooing than that.

At the Smithsonian Institution sundown seed has been found a tempting bait for rats. Put the seed in a trap and you can't keep the rats out with a shotgun.

Ohio consoles herself with the thought that if she is not getting many of the leaves she is cutting a swath socially in Washington. Surely this should be satisfying.

From the kind of ball-playing which seems to be in vogue the country over, it appears that the season has not yet opened. The boys are practicing on the spectators.

The White House is overrun with red ants and office-seekers. And the ants don't flee from the wrath of the office-seekers.

MAX SPRATT is Collector of the port of Sitka, Alaska. Being a lineal descendant of the famous Jack, he is entitled to a place in the George Washington Centennial quadrille.

If you are going to Oklahoma ask the folks at home to ship you canned meats and vegetables until in due course of mail they receive your brief but conclusive obituary. A stitch in time is worth two in the bush.

The electric light company which turned on its current full force when the men, under the instructions of the Mayor of New York, were taking down the wires, should have an opportunity to explain why it wanted to murder those men.

If the London Times had it to do over the day of Ireland's deliverance would not be so near at hand. It is odd to see that newspaper in the attitude of helping the cause of Ireland. Some times a blind enemy is more helpful than a wise friend.

The developments in the A. T. Stewart case show that Judge Hilton knew when he had a good thing. When a pushing man has to deal with a rich, ignorant, good-natured woman, how much better to work that one never failing than to try to instruct Wall Street in his business.

A Wise and Clement Governor.

Governor Richardson, of South Carolina, refuses to allow two colored men to hang for lynching, because it is the first time that State that colored men have been engaged in lynching, and it is the first time in the history of the State that anybody has been convicted of that offense. The Governor knows that if the lynchers had been white they would not have been convicted. In this case the executive clemency has been wisely exercised.

Why They Unlike Wannamaker.

If anybody in the office of a Mugwump newspaper so far forgets the proprieties of the occasion as to speak respectfully of Wannamaker, there is a spasm in the editorial chair. Mr. Wannamaker's offenses are that he is a Republican, a successful business man, the founder and superintendent of the greatest Sunday school in the country—and with all this thick upon him President Harrison had the hardihood to invite him to the council table. For this accumulation of original sin the mugwumps never will permit Mr. Wannamaker to atone.

A Matter of Dress.

Some Pennsylvanians are urging that that State be allowed to wear their dress uniforms, which many of the commands have bought at considerable cost. In every public demonstration in which Pennsylvanians' troops have appeared in their regulation uniform they have won applause and the highest commendation for their bearing. The absence of gaw-gaws made them look like real soldiers, ready for business.

Nothing does so much as the regulation uniform to take away the idea of mere "militia" and to inspire the people with a real respect for our citizen soldiery.

Railroad Relief Associations.

Mr. Charles Francis Adams, in the April Scribner's, discussing the prevention of railroad strikes, strongly recommends relief associations. The Financial Chronicle, commenting on Mr. Adams' article, says:

Some five or six years ago the directors of the London & North-western Railway persuaded the five thousand skilled hands in their shops at Crewe to consent to the establishment of a pension fund. After five years' trial the workmen have revolted against the scheme. They do not object to the rate charged nor question the company's good faith, but they say in so many words that they prefer present advantage to any such remote prospects as the pension fund affords. Their straightforwardness in what they say makes the matter all the more significant. There appears to be no serious dissatisfaction with the management. The simply do not like the system.

If it is the case in England, where the relations between railroad companies and their employees are remarkably good, what hope can we have from such plans in America, where the conditions are less permanent, the relations are more strained, and their employees somewhat more astounded and the feeling of personal independence stronger? Instated of providing a means for binding the employees to the service of the company, such a plan might simply furnish new sources of dissatisfaction. It is a common feeling among workmen in factories as well as in railroads to dislike anything which seems to bind them to the service of one concern. They look on it with suspicion; they feel it a constant source of possible imposition. We do not say that the system cannot be successfully carried out; but we are by no means so sanguine of its smooth working as Mr. Adams himself seems to be.

"The man simply do not like the system" seems to be the real present difficulty between the Baltimore & Ohio Company and those of its employees who do not wish to go into the beneficial association. So long as the men feel the system will be a source of irritation.

A Deformed Civil Service.

Here is a solid chunk of wisdom from the New York Herald:

Some Civil Service reformers desire to create a permanent Civil Service in all its branches. We do not agree with them in this, because to take away from the President the power of removal would be to take away his responsibility to the people for the honest and efficient execution of his duties which would lead to endless corruption and inefficiency.

The professional Civil Service reformers proceed on the supposition that the President of the United States is always a man of much less capacity and honesty than themselves. By devices of their own they would so tie the President's hands as to leave the difference between him and a $1,000 department clerk a mere matter of $10,000.

A Case of False Pretense.

The Mugwumps, and some Democrats from whom something better was to be expected, are hammering the President because he did not give Postmaster Pearson another term in the New York post-office. They refer to President Cleveland, saying, behold, there was a Democratic President who retained a Republican in the most profitable postoffice in the country.

It was never a secret that Postmaster Pearson was retained because in the campaign of 1884 he was not in sympathy with the Republican nominees; because he desired the defeat of those nominees and did what he could for the election of Mr. Cleveland.

The retention of Postmaster Pearson was as clear a case of paying an election debt as can be found. This the Mugwumps and complaining Democrats know, and this is what makes their virtuous complaint a case of false pretense.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

Yale is soon to have a cricket eleven. Blockton, has a new paper called Briar's Bug.

Inspector Swindells is an efficient member of the Washington police force.

A German peasant has been detected in tapping a telephone wire to cure his rheumatism.

A Philadelphia connoisseur in eating says that muskrat meat tastes better than any sirloin.

New Yorkers recently carried a dry goods store out to Tacoma, W. T., (3,000 miles), in a twenty-eight-car train.

A Brooklyn grocer says that out of $700 loss last year over $500 came through church members in good standing.

"Doughnut Hotel and Sausage Emporium" is the name of the latest downtown cheap restaurant in New York City.

London proposes buying a seventy-five acre plot of ground in the southern part of the metropolis, and converting it into a public park.

George Wiseman was sentenced at Charleston, Mo., to two years in the penitentiary for having a live living, two dead and two unborn wives.

High winds tolled the bell of a church at Sea Island at a night or two ago, and the deafening sounds greatly worried the superstitious people there.

An Indiana judge has decided that a traveler can have his rules and regulations as well as a hotel, and that where they conflict the latter are equal.

Women are at last permitted to practice medicine in Canada, and the first to receive a license is Miss Mitchell, of Kingston, a graduate of Queen's University.

One of the greatest industries of Nummernberg is making lead for soldiers. Eight hundred tons are made and engaged, and they turn out 10,000,000 soldiers a day.

THE SUBTERRANEAN IN NEW YORK.

Kills Henry Roberts, Assistant Treasurer of the United States.

The office given to Ellis Henry Roberts is one of great importance and responsibility. He is in charge of the Sub-Treasury in the greatest commercial city of the New World. Mr. Roberts was born in Utica, New York, September 30, 1837, and is a printer by trade. He was graduated at Yale in 1850. After a brief career as a teacher in Utica he took charge of the Herald of that city, of which he is now editor and proprietor. He has been a delegate to Republican national conventions several times, beginning with that of 1864. In 1867 he served as a member of the State Assembly, and in 1870 was elected to Congress, where he remained during two terms. He was a candidate for Congress again in 1876, but was defeated. Mr. Roberts is an earnest protectionist and has lectured and published a book to defend the system. He has written ably on his travels, and is an accomplished and interesting man. In his office he has charge of the largest part of the funds collected and disbursed by the government at Washington.

It is any Wonder
